1. [redacted] Mike Szymanski, in the Anchorage office of Senator Mike Gravel (D., Alaska), called and asked for information on how to contact an area representative of CIA to set up an interview for [redacted] who is presently attending the University of Alaska. I told Szymanski that I was not sure we had a recruiter in Alaska, but that I would check and have someone call him back. Office of Personnel has been advised.

3. [redacted] Talked to Tom Korologos, Special Assistant to the President for Legislative Affairs (Senate), and told him that in response to his request we were LDXing a "talking paper" and some illustrative examples of security leaks which the White House may want to use to justify its reluctance to reveal sensitive matters to the Congress. I offered a personal comment that there are a lot more bad leaks out of the Executive than the Legislative and if they wanted to stir this one up they might come out second best.
